

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA

William L. Riffey,)	C/A No.: 1:09-2089-PMD-SVH Plaintiff,)
)
)
vs.)
)	REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION
Harley G. Lappin, ML Rivera, Robert) Giorno, and Robert Vendel,)
)
Defendants.)

Plaintiff, William L. Riffey, proceeding pro se, brings this civil action pursuant to Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, 397 (1971). Plaintiff is an inmate at the Federal Correctional Institution (FCI) in Estill, South Carolina, a facility of the Bureau of Prisons (BOP), and files this action in forma pauperis under 28 U.S.C. § 1915.

Before the court is Defendants' Motion to Dismiss [Entry #29]. Pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B), and Local Rule 73.02(B)(2)(d) and (e) (D.S.C.), the undersigned is authorized to review such complaints for relief. Because the motion to dismiss is a dispositive motion, this Report and Recommendation is entered for review by the district judge.

I. Factual and Procedural Background

Plaintiff filed his complaint in this action on August 10, 2009 [Entry #1]. Defendants' motion to dismiss was filed on November 23, 2009. Pursuant to Roseboro v. Garrison, 528 F.2d 309 (4th Cir. 1975), the court advised Plaintiff of the summary judgment and dismissal procedures and the possible consequences if he failed to respond adequately to Defendants' motion [Entry #30]. Plaintiff filed a timely response in opposition to Defendants' motion on November 30, 2009 [Entry #32], and Defendants filed a reply [Entry #42]. Having carefully considered the parties' submissions and the record in this case, the court recommends Defendants' motion to dismiss be granted.

Plaintiff seeks injunctive relief from Defendants. He claims he was deemed employable and assigned a work "detail which mismatched his 100% disability." (Compl. 3). He contends that Defendants have denied him the medical plan recommended by the outside practitioner he saw in December 2008. (Compl. 3–5). He contends Defendants' actions have exacerbated his pre-existing medical condition and caused him more injury. (Id.) He requests to be moved to a federal medical facility that administers rehabilitation programs to help him reclaim the abilities he lost due to medical negligence, or that the court order Defendants to follow the pain management plan recommended by the outside practitioner in December 2008. (Id.)

II. Standard of Review

Defendants move to dismiss this action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 12(b). This court is required to liberally construe pro se complaints. Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94 (2007). Pro se complaints are held to a less stringent standard than those drafted by attorneys, and a federal district court is charged with liberally construing a complaint filed by a pro se litigant to allow the development of a potentially meritorious case. Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 9 (1980); Cruz v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319 (1972); Gordon v. Leeke, 574 F.2d 1147, 1151 (4th Cir. 1978). When a federal court is evaluating a pro se complaint, the plaintiff's factual allegations are assumed to be true. Erickson, 551 U.S. at 93 (citing Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555-56 (2007)). The mandated liberal construction afforded to pro se pleadings means that if the court can reasonably read the pleadings to state a valid claim on which the plaintiff could prevail, it should do so; however, a district court may not rewrite a petition to "conjure up questions never squarely presented" to the court. Beaudett v. City of Hampton, 775 F.2d 1274, 1278 (4th Cir. 1985).

Moreover, the requirement of liberal construction does not mean that the court can ignore a clear failure in the pleading to allege facts which set forth a claim cognizable in a federal district court. See Weller v. Dep't of Soc. Servs., 901 F.2d 387 (4th Cir. 1990); see also Ashcroft v. Iqbal, --- U.S. ----, ----, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1953 (2009) (outlining pleading requirements under Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for "all civil actions"). Although the court must liberally construe a pro se complaint, the United States Supreme Court has recently made clear that, under Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 8, a plaintiff in any civil action must do more than make mere conclusory statements to state a claim. See Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949; Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555. Rather, the complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim that is plausible on its face. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949; Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. The reviewing court need only accept as true the complaint's factual allegations, not its legal conclusions. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949; Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555.

Expounding on its decision in Twombly, the United States Supreme Court stated in

Iqbal:

[T]he pleading standard Rule 8 announces does not require “detailed factual allegations,” but it demands more than an unadorned, the defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation. A pleading that offers “labels and conclusions” or “a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders “naked assertion[s]” devoid of “further factual enhancement.” To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.

Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 556, 557, 570) (citations omitted); see also Bass v. Dupont, 324 F.3d 761, 765 (4th Cir. 2003).

III. Analysis

Plaintiff is bringing suit against the warden of a federal prison. As such, his constitutional claims are evaluated under Bivens. Bivens is the case establishing, as a general proposition, that victims of a constitutional violation perpetrated by a federal actor may sue the offender for damages in federal court despite the absence of explicit statutory authorization for such suits. Carlson v. Green, 446 U.S. 14, 18 (1980); see also Holly v. Scott, 434 F.3d 287, 289 (4th Cir. 2006). A Bivens claim is analogous to a claim brought against state officials under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Therefore, caselaw involving § 1983 claims is applicable in Bivens actions, and vice versa. See Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 814-820, n. 30 (1982); see also Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825 (1994); Bolin v. Story, 225 F.3d 1234, 1241-1242 (11th Cir. 2000); Campbell v. Civil Air Patrol, 131

F.Supp.2d 1303, 1310, n. 8 (M.D.Ala. 2001) (“the court shall refer interchangeably to cases” decided under both § 1983 and Bivens).

A. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

Defendants have moved to dismiss the complaint based in part on the defense of Plaintiff’s failure to exhaust his administrative remedies. The Prison Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), Pub. L. No. 104-134, 110 Stat. 1321 (codified as amended at 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) (1996)), mandates, among other things, that federal prisoners exhaust their administrative remedies prior to filing civil actions. See Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 211, (2007); Booth v. Churner, 532 U.S. 731 (2001). Exhaustion is required for “[a]ll action[s]. . . brought with respect to prison conditions, whether under § 1983 or any other Federal law.” Porter v. Nussle, 534 U.S. 516, 524 (2002) (internal quotations omitted). The PLRA’s exhaustion requirement “applies to all inmate suits about prison life, whether they involve general circumstances or particular episodes, and whether they allege excessive force or some other wrong.” Id., 534 U.S. at 532. Exhaustion is a threshold requirement which must be satisfied in order for prisoner complaints to proceed. See Jones, 549 U.S. at 216; Booth, 532 U.S. at 741. Although PLRA exhaustion is not jurisdictional, failure to exhaust is an affirmative defense that can be pleaded by the defendants. Jones, 549 U.S. at 216. No unexhausted claims may be considered by the court; such claims must be dismissed. Jones, 549 U.S. at 211. The PLRA requires “proper” exhaustion, that is, “a prisoner must file complaints and appeals in the place, and at the time, the prison's administrative rules require." Woodford v. Ngo, 548 U.S. 81, 93 (2006).

The Bureau of Prisons has a three-tiered administrative grievance process. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 542.10 et seq. An inmate may complain about any aspect of his confinement by first seeking to informally resolve the complaint at the institution level. 28 C.F.R. § 542.13. If the matter cannot be resolved informally, the inmate may file a formal written complaint to the warden. 28 C.F.R. § 542.14. The matter will be investigated, and a written response provided to the inmate. Id. If dissatisfied with the response, the inmate may appeal to the Regional Director. 28 C.F.R. § 542.15(a). If dissatisfied with the regional response, the inmate may appeal to the General Counsel. Id. Appeal to the General Counsel is the final level of agency review. 28 C.F.R. §542.15(a).

Requiring exhaustion allows prison officials an opportunity to resolve disputes concerning the exercise of their responsibilities before being haled into court. Jones, 549 U.S. at 204. It also has the potential to reduce the number of inmate suits and to improve the quality of suits that are filed by producing a useful administrative record. Id.; Woodford, 548 U.S. at 94-95. When a grievance is filed shortly after the event giving rise to the grievance, witnesses can be identified and questioned while memories are still fresh, and evidence can be gathered and preserved. Woodford, 548 U.S. at 95. This is the reason for the BOP requirement that inmates institute their grievances within 20 days of the date of incident giving rise to the complaint. See 28 C.F.R. § 542.14(a). As the Court explained:

The benefits of exhaustion can be realized only if the prison grievance system is given a fair opportunity to consider the grievance. The prison grievance system will not have such an opportunity unless the grievant complies with the system's critical procedural rules. A prisoner who does not want to participate in the prison grievance system will have little incentive to comply with the system's procedural rules unless noncompliance carries a sanction, and under respondent's interpretation of the PLRA noncompliance carries no significant sanction. For example, a prisoner wishing to bypass available administrative remedies could simply file a late grievance without providing any reason for failing to file on time. If the prison then rejects the grievance as untimely, the prisoner could proceed directly to federal court. And acceptance of the late grievance would not thwart the prisoner's wish to bypass the administrative process; the prisoner could easily achieve this by violating other procedural rules until the prison administration has no alternative but to dismiss the grievance on procedural grounds. We are confident that the PLRA did not create such a toothless scheme.

Woodford, 548 U.S. at 95.

In his complaint, Plaintiff argues that his deteriorating health conditions warrant urgent preclusion to exhausting his administrative remedies. (Compl. 4). He also claims that he has exhausted his administrative remedies, stating he received a rejection notice on all levels of his administrative remedy. (Id.) However, a review of the records maintained on SENTRY, the computer-based system on which all federal inmate submissions are permanently recorded, reveals Plaintiff has not exhausted his remedies available under the formal administrative remedy procedure established by the BOP concerning any of the allegations in his complaint. Cassaro Aff. [Entry #29-2]. Under the PLRA, there is no urgent medical need exception for the exhaustion requirement. Dudley v. Bureau of Prisons, 2009 WL 775535, *1 (D.S.D. 2009) (Eighth Circuit does not recognize an exception to PLRA for urgent medical need); Lipscomb v. Hickey, 2009 WL 671308, *8 (S.D.W.Va. 2009) (“It does not appear that any exemption based upon mental or physical impairments has been recognized.”). While Plaintiff has filed several administrative remedies regarding his medical care, he has not exhausted any remedy as it relates to his medical care. (See Entry #29-2). Plaintiff was given a chance to correct and re-submit his grievances within ten days after they were rejected, but he failed to do so. Instead, Plaintiff filed this action. (Id.) Plaintiff’s claim that his medical need is urgent does not excuse the PLRA requirement of exhaustion. Because Plaintiff has not exhausted his administrative remedies on any of the allegations set forth in his complaint, these claims are therefore not ripe for judicial review and should be dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies.

B. Personal Jurisdiction of Defendant Lappin

Defendant Lappin also asserts that he is not subject to personal jurisdiction. Defendant Lappin argues that his periodic travel to the federal correctional institutions in South Carolina and his inmate inquiry responses sent to this state are infrequent at best and insufficient to create personal jurisdiction. Plaintiff appears to agree with Defendant as he states in a filing with the court: “It is clear that Defendant Lappin does not have sufficient contact with South Carolina to satisfy the requirements of personal jurisdiction.” [Entry #37]. Therefore, Defendant Lappin should be dismissed from this action.

C. Qualified Immunity

Defendants also assert that they are entitled to qualified immunity in their individual capacities. The Supreme Court in Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 102 (1982), established the standard which the court is to follow in determining whether the defendant is protected by this immunity. That decision held that government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Harlow, 457 U.S. at 818.

In addressing qualified immunity, the United States Supreme Court has held that “a court must first determine whether the plaintiff has alleged the deprivation of an actual constitutional right at all and, if so, proceed to determine whether that right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation.” Wilson v. Layne, 526 U.S. 603, 609 (1999); see also Suarez Corp. Indus. v. McGraw, 202 F.3d 676, 685 (4th Cir. 2000). Further, the Supreme Court held that “[d]eciding the constitutional question before addressing the qualified immunity question also promotes clarity in the legal standards for official conduct, to the benefit of both the officers and the general public.” Wilson, 526 U.S. at 609. If the court first determines that no right has been violated, the inquiry ends there “because government officials cannot have known of a right that does not exist.” Porterfield v. Lott, 156 F.3d 563, 567 (4th Cir. 1998). As discussed above, Plaintiff has failed to present sufficient evidence to support his constitutional violation allegations.

Nevertheless, assuming arguendo that Plaintiff has presented sufficient evidence of a constitutional violation, Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity from suit.

In Maciariello v. Sumner, 973 F.2d 295 (4th Cir. 1992), the Fourth Circuit further explained the theory of qualified immunity:

Governmental officials performing discretionary functions are shielded from liability for money damages so long as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Moreover, there are two levels at which the immunity shield operates. First, the particular right must be clearly established in the law. Second, the manner in which this right applies to the actions of the official must also be apparent. Officials are not liable for bad guesses in gray areas; they are liable for transgressing bright lines.

Maciariello, 973 F.2d at 298.

In the instant case, Plaintiff has failed to establish any theory of liability upon the part of Defendants, and, furthermore, Plaintiff has failed to establish the existence of any constitutional deprivation. However, if the court were to find that Plaintiff has established some theory of liability upon the part of Defendants, and therefore, the existence of a constitutional deprivation, Defendants are still entitled to qualified immunity. The record before the court shows that as to Plaintiff and the specific events at issue, these Defendants performed the discretionary functions of their respective official duties in an objectively reasonable fashion. They did not transgress any statutory or constitutional rights of Plaintiff that they were aware of in the discretionary exercise of their respective professional judgments. Thus, to the extent the district judge finds that a constitutional violation occurred, these Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity.

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons discussed above, it is recommended that Defendant's Motion to Dismiss [Entry #29] be granted and this case be dismissed in its entirety.

IT IS SO RECOMMENDED.

July 27, 2010
Florence, South Carolina

Shiva V. Hodges
United States Magistrate Judge

The parties are directed to note the important information in the attached “Notice of Right to File Objections to Report and Recommendation.”